LA TERRE DE JARS : MATIÈRE ESSENTIELLE

Toutes les terres utilisées dans nos ateliers sont des terres dites de haute température.

Ces terres donnent après cuisson un type de céramique particulier appelé "grès".

Le grès doit sans doute son nom au fait que entre 1280° et 1300° les éléments organiques qui composent ces terres se vitrifient et reconstituent la roche.

Au contraire de la faïence, la terre de grès cuite est étanche, non poreuse, même sans émail.

On parle de "terre fermée". De ce fait, elle conserve longtemps le chaud et le froid des aliments. De plus, elle est solide, et non gélive.

Lorsqu'on veut modifier la texture d'une terre de grès, on y incorpore de la "chamotte", c'est à dire de la terre déjà cuite et pilée plus ou moins finement. Ces ajouts sont souvent dictés par des besoins techniques, ou esthétiques, ou les deux.

La chamotte modifiant la structure de la terre lui apporte plus de solidité mécanique et un aspect de surface à forte personnalité.

NOS ÉMAUX AUX CENDRES VÉGÉTALES

Daniel de Montmollin

En observant les résultats des cuissons dans les grands fours à bois couchés primitifs, on s'est aperçu, il y a très longtemps, que le bois et les végétaux secs servant de combustible avaient, à haute température, un pouvoir émaillant sur les céramiques.

En effet, la haute température de grès (1280 - 1340°) fait vitrifier les éléments organiques contenus dans les fibres du bois et transforme ceux-ci en émail.

Le pourcentage différent de ces éléments dans les espèces de végétaux fait que chaque essence d'arbre donnera un émail, une matière différente.

Reconstituer un émail avec les cendres et l'étalonner, est un travail long et difficile que seuls les artisans pouvaient se permettre pour de petites productions.

Les ateliers Jars ont pris ce risque d'utiliser ces recherches et ces techniques aux résultats instables et souvent aléatoires pour des quantités de production importantes.

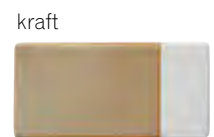

C'est au prix de ce travail artisanal que les cendres donnent ces couleurs et ces matières si particulières, une profondeur d'émail unique sur certaines collections comme Wabi, Dashi ...

Ce savoir-faire, comme toute l'évolution de la terre dans ce métier, vient enrichir la magie de la cuisson.

Véritables trésors, nos émaux sont le fruit de précieux secrets de fabrication. Trouver une teinte, un effet, est un chemin créatif exigeant : imaginer, échouer, recommencer, affiner nuances et demi tons pour enfin trouver LA matière. Oser les contrastes. Composer avec une palette infinie. Tons vifs, profonds, cristallisés, craquelés, mats ou brillants. Trempés à la louche, posés au pinceau sur un contour, ou pulvérisés délicatement à la main, le geste de l'artisan est toujours beau et précis. Lors de la cuisson dite Grand Feu, l'émail fusionne avec la matière grès. Il révèle alors ses nuances et effets, ses aléas subtils et fascinants. Magie de la céramique.

- Composés de matières naturelles, nos émaux sont fabriqués avec des poudres minérales, sans plomb ni cadmium -

Chez Jars nous aimons par-dessus tout mélanger, twister, dépareiller, les couleurs, les formes, les mats & brillants. C'est ainsi que les tables sont les plus vivantes. Alors suivez vos envies ... et surtout surtout amusez vous !

At Jars', what we love to do above all is mixing, changing, mismatching, colors, shapes, shiny & matt glazes. This is the way tables look the most alive. Then follow your desire ... And especially, have fun !
